Babysitting Service

Hey people, I was a little bored so I decided to write this. Okay I'm lying, my cousin actually wrote something like this and she decided to sell it to me for my favorite t-shirt. It was good as it was also annoying. I mean, come on, rearranged and corrected pieces of scrambled words should never be traded for such ;). Anywho, (I'm sorry but I'm just used to saying that instead of "anyway") Read and Rate^^. I hope you like it. Stand, Bow, Aye^^!.

"Hi, Mrs. Kazami", Alice greeted while coming down the stairs.

"Hello Alice, we were just talking about you", Shiori smiled at her.

"Yeah," her grand-father added, "Shiori needs your help". Why did Shiori need her help, wait- what did Shun do this time? The mere thought of him made her heart miss a beat.

As if reading her mind, she added, "Oh it's not about Shun, so you don't need to worry."

Alice let out a breath she didn't know she had been holding in. "No, I wasn't thinking about him or anything," she said blushing. "So, what is it?" she asked plopping herself on one of the sofas, (the one beside Shiori) and crossing her legs.

"Well, I was wondering if you still baby-sit", Shiori said.

"Yeah I still do," Alice reassured her. "Mostly weekends, since school is in session now". She baby-sat a lot of kids, well, she,

Runo and Julie. They did kids mostly 3-8 years but on some occasions they did older kids, although not exceeding 13 years.

"Well," her grand-father said, "Shiori is going out of town on a business trip and was wondering if you'd baby-sit for her". She was a little confused, why would Shiori ask her to baby-sit after all, she and Shun were the only ones who stayed there.

"You have another k-?!"

"Well, not really," Shiori interrupted her, smiling softly. "You'll get to know about it if you accept the offer. And of course I'll pay you". This was a little confusing, did she have another kid or not? How was it even possible to have a kid (putting Shun aside) as she was SINGLE?!

"You know, I'll be away on a business trip at the time so you can stay at her place for the time being, or you could stay at Runo's," her grand-father added. Alice mentally looked over the offer; she could stay at Runo's place and hang out with her every single hour of the day. They could talk about typical teenage stuff, like school, crushes (Shun, obviously), fashion, music, celebrities, blah blah blah, the regular things teenage girls talk about. She'd also be able to get to the caf   earlier since she was temporarily staying with the owners.

But if she stayed at Shiori's, she'd get to see Shun more often, be able to get to know this kid Shiori was talking about, get to see Shun more often, get paid, and   get to see Shun more often^^.

"I'll do it," she said, smiling. She still had to pack and she began making a mental list.

"You will! Oh that's so great, thank you so much sweetie," Shiori exclaimed, standing up and wrapping her in a really tight bear-hug. Alice was just about to go like, "can't breathe" when Shiori finally let go of her and smiled at her.

"So, when do I start?"

"Right Now!" Shiori announced. How on earth was she going to pack up clothes if she started "Right Now!"

So tell me, was it good or did it suck? Your honest opinion, okay? I'll let you know this; to me, it sucked cuz I am being forced to eat broccoli right now so I am not really fired or revved up, like Natsu. But I can promise the next chapters will be awesome^^ cuz the mystery kid and Shun will finally "show-face". (it's a term used in Nigeria meaning that someone will just come for an event, show his face or make his appearance known to the hosts, then leave. This happens so you don't get bad-mouthed by haters when people talk about the event and they mention people who didn't "show-face". It's actually English words but it's used in a Nigerian "language" called Pidgin English. It's not really a language, it's just English (and some not English) that has been "modified"^^). REVIEW, please. Stand, Bow, Aye!
